The Seasoned Family Law Attorneys of Belli, Weil & Grozbean, P.C. Experienced Divorce Lawyers in Troubled Times

Divorce and separation are trying events that bring families to the brink of chaos. For the parents and children involved, stress, turmoil and uncertainty rule daily life.

Even in these tragic circumstances, there are individuals fortunate enough to have an attorney they trust to help them stay focused, navigate overwhelming legal issues and lessen emotional and financial tolls.

Family law attorneys Stuart H. Grozbean and Henry E. Weil of Belli, Weil & Grozbean, P.C. understand the immense pressures on spouses and parents in separation, divorce, child support, child custody, alimony, abuse and related family law cases. Their priorities are simple and clear:

- 1) help clients initiate a plan and stay the course to obtain their objectives; and
- 2) provide steadfast, compassionate support.

Renowned Experts in Family Law

Grozbean and Weil have each spent many years advocating for both mothers' and fathers' rights and are recognized leaders in their field. Grozbean is the developer of Maryland's child support guidelines program, used by virtually every court statewide. Both Weil and Grozbean were named Super Lawyers in 2008, ranking them among the top 5 percent of lawyers in Maryland.

The experience Grozbean and Weil bring to each case assures clients they are in capable hands and puts opposing counsel on notice that they have a strong advocate to reckon with.

"Initially, we try to create a dialog with a spouse's attorney to try to find some common ground," Grozbean explains. "However, attorneys who oppose us know we are not afraid to go to court to protect our clients' interests. Our reputation often helps to settle cases."

Realistic and Resolute

Knowing when to be practical and when to be aggressive, according to Grozbean, is at the heart of a good lawyer's ability to see clients through tough, traumatic domestic disputes.

"Our job is to keep our clients focused and their expectations realistic," Grozbean says. "We give them a road map, and we tell them to expect detours once in a while. We urge them to carefully consider any action they might take. We steer them toward an honest assessment of their case."

Earning Clients' Trust and Faith

When Grozbean and Weil first meet with clients, many of whom are consumed by fear, anger and devastation, they share their pain. The firm assures them there is an endpoint. Then, the firm asks the clients to take a leap of faith and allow the attorneys of Belli, Weil & Grozbean to do what they do best — protect their clients' interests.

Real Lawyers for Real People with Real Problems

"Our purpose is not only to know and apply the law," Grozbean stresses, "But to aid and comfort our clients in their time of need."
